

I Heard You

Backed into a corner
By fears and feelings

I had no strength
My hands tied, my heart slowing

My vision dimming
My hearing gone

My voice was becoming soft
Too soft for anyone to hear

I had one last chance
I had to try

So I opened my mouth,
“Help”, not even I could hear.

Suddenly the fears ran,
The feelings disappeared

A new strength came over me
My hands free, a new heartbeat

I began to see new things
I even heard what others could not

I was silent, though a question
Screamed from my heart

The answer then came,
“I heard you”

By Belinda Morse